

PRELIMS OPTIMA 2020

Santosh Sir

Minimum Effort and Maximum Reward

Few important Questions?

Q1. Should I only focus on mains now since there is still around 4 months for Prelims? Why don't I pick up Prelims two months before the exam?

The smart strategy at this point would be to focus more on the easy scoring areas (Ethics and Essay) for mains and preparing major sections of your optional. But, completely leaving Prelims preparation for two months could later prove to be counter-productive. Everyone will capitalize on the additional time and try to increase their chances of clearing Prelims. Completely leaving Prelims preparation for two months can put you in a panic mode with only two months to exams.

Q.2 What more I need to do because of change in date?

You need to cover current affairs till September with focus on March – September 2020 current affairs. This is the extra work which you need to do. Thus the task is more challenging now. The competition will become more tougher , because even unprepared candidates will get more time to prepare thus increasing the competition.

Q3. What should be the schedule going ahead in terms of balancing Prelims and Mains?

You need to integrate both mains and prelims preparation. Both exact study plan will differ as per your present status.

There would be two sets of aspirants :

Set A: Aspirants who have prepared well for Prelims keeping 31st May in mind, then you can for the first two months set aside 2 hours daily for your Prelims and dedicate remaining time for Mains.

Set B: Aspirants who for some reason could not prepare well and are under confident, then you need to give at least 4 hours daily to cover your remaining syllabus and gain confidence.
